

How to Run a Book Club

My Source

1. Determine What Type of Book Club You Want to Host

There are countless kinds of book clubs. Some book clubs are highly social, while others are seriously academic. Maybe you want to start a book club that only reads titles by local authors.

2. Decide Where Your Book Club Will Meet

Some book clubs run both virtually and physically, either alternating online and in-person discussions or running both at the same time.

If you want to host a book club that meets physically, consider how much space you'll need. Examples: coffee shop, home, public library, and classroom.

3. Decide How You'll Choose Books

Things to keep in mind: topic, length, and reading level. If you're having trouble deciding on a title, NoveList is a great resource.

4. Think About How Members Will Access the Books

Digital books—whether eBooks or audiobooks—are a great option for book clubs. They can be accessed from just about anywhere and all of your book club members can access the same title simultaneously—no worrying about holds!

5. Set Up the Discussion

Here are resources available to help guide your book club: LitLovers, GoodReads, Reading Group Guides

6. Don't Forget Logistics

Determine how often your book club will meet, what time you'll meet and how you'll communicate all of that and more with your book club members between meetings are all important considerations.